Change to the order in which map designation notices are received on the GESTIM website

Better management of queues for map designation notices

As of March 27, 2019, the order in which map designation notices are received are be managed to the very precise degree of one millionth of a second. This will resolve the issue of lands being designated on a map simultaneously at the same second.

The change will mean fewer random draws, pursuant to Section 207 of the Mining Act, and therefore faster processing of map designations at a lower cost.

NOTE

Submitted map designation notices are ranked in the order they are received to one millionth of a second.

For each designated land, you can see the chronological order of when your designation notice was received in the queue. Go to the “Designated Land” tab of the “Consult Register” module.¹
